BUSINESS NEAR YOU: Farmington Hills couple hope to clean up with Pet Butler

July 16, 2006

BY CAROL CAIN
FREE PRESS BUSINESS WRITER✉ Email this 🖨 Print thisBusiness: Pet Butler, Farmington Hills.Owners: Julie and David Kuntzman of Farmington Hills opened their franchise in June. David, 41, works full-time in sales for an auto supplier and helps out part-time while Julie, 43, runs the enterprise from the couple's home.Some background: It is the first Michigan location of the national Pet Waste Cleanup Service, which is based in Dallas.

David Kuntzman believes there is a huge market for Pet Waste services.

"The residents here take great pride in maintaining their yards, but at the same time lead busy lifestyles, which makes it a challenge for them to keep their yards clean when they have pets," he says.

"I suppose you could say our new business stinks, but we look forward to really cleaning up," he adds with a laugh.

Its niche: Pet Butler has provided professional pet waste cleanup and removal services since 1998.

The company charges a per-visit fee to collect dog and cat waste and dispose of it properly. The Kuntzmans serve Oakland and Wayne counties.

"Most of our customers have us come once or twice a week," David Kuntzman says. "The cost can be as low as $6.80 a visit and goes up from up there."
